Dr Robert Reville, Moodys

Dr. Robert T. Reville is a Senior Director for Market Development at Moody's and a member of the management team of the newly formed Moody's Casualty. Dr. Reville is also Adjunct Professor of Business Economics and Finance in the Arkley Institute for Risk Management, Marshall School of Business, University of Southern California.

Prior to Moody's, Dr. Reville co-founded and served as CEO of Praedicat, the world's first "casualty catastrophe" modeling company. In September 2024, Praedicat was acquired by Moody's. Before Praedicat, Dr. Reville was a Senior Economist at the RAND Corporation, where he led an innovative R&D project using early AI technologies to mine peer-reviewed science to identify emerging "next asbestos" risks. This project laid the foundation for Praedicat, launched in 2012. Under Dr. Reville's leadership, Praedicat has created a market-leading litigation tracker across all new mass torts and the world's first "casualty catastrophe" model. Praedicat works with over 30 insurers to quantify the impact of litigation finance, identify emerging mass tort risk, and to facilitate data-driven underwriting, pricing and reserving in the face of social inflation exposures.

Dr. Reville's professional career has been marked by significant contributions to the fields of liability, risk, and insurance. In addition to Praedicat, he directed the RAND Institute for Civil Justice, which published influential work on asbestos and mass torts, and co-directed the RAND Center for Terrorism Risk Management Policy, whose research on terrorism insurance was cited in congressional debates over the Terrorism Risk Insurance Act. At RAND, Dr. Reville published over a dozen studies on workers' compensation, which shaped reform legislation in California. He holds a Ph.D. in economics from Brown University.
